

The Future of Retirement in China

Summary

The SOA and the LIMRA Secure Retirement Institute are pleased to present, The Future of Retirement in China, which reports the results of new research on the current state and future opportunity of the retirement market in China. A combined study and the six installments are available in English and Chinese.

The report series examines consumer attitudes, beliefs, and behaviors on various retirement issues including:

- Retirement Goals and Objectives
- Retirement Risks
- Retirement Savings
- Available Retirement Options
- Use of Financial Advisors
- Strategies for Managing Retirement Risks

The follow installments are included in the series of reports:

Edition One: Key Findings summarizes the significant outcomes from the study.

Edition Two: Retirement Definitions and Demographics, which explains the characteristics of the study participants and their perceptions about retirement.

Edition Three: Planning and Information explores individuals' retirement planning practices and retirement information.

Edition Four: Funding Retirement examines how individuals might fund their retirement.

Edition Five: Perceptions and Concern examines how perceptions and concerns about retirement differ by province in China.

Edition Six: History, Systems and Review summarizes the evolution of the China retirement system and where it stands today.

Author:

Lauren Finnie LIMRA International Research

Who Might Read:

- Actuaries
- Researchers
- Insurance company professionals

Link to full report:

• The Future of Retirement in China

You Might Also Like:

- Understanding the Changing Middle Market for Life Insurance in China
- Population Aging, Implications for Asset Values, and Impact for Pension Plans: An International Study
- Will the Retirement of Canadian Baby Boomers Deflate Asset Values?