

ACTUARIAL RESEARCH CLEARING HOUSE 1980 VOL. 1

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

ARCH is an informal communication regarding current actuarial research which the Committee on Research of the Society of Actuaries offers to members and friends of the actuarial community. Unlike most professional journals, ARCH has as its primary goal speedy dissemination of current thinking and aids to research rather than the publishing of thoroughly edited papers. While primary emphasis is on distribution of short notes or papers on specific research topics, we also act as a clearing house for items embodied in letters between researchers, useful computer programs (or announcements of the availability of such programs), translations of appropriate material in foreign languages, problems and solutions, etc.

To avoid typesetting and printing costs we make photo-reproductions of individual items with a covering index for each issue and an editorial

Briefly our editorial policy is as follows. The Committee on Research or the Society of Actuaries will not be responsible for statements made or opinions expressed in the articles, criticisms and discussions in this publication. Editorial work is expected to be held to a minimum. Balanced with a normal desire to present reasonably worthwhile and cohesive material is our wish to allow anyone the opportunity of circulating his or her ideas to our readership. However, the editor reserves the right to cut, condense or rearrange information and cannot guarantee publication of either solicited or unsolicited material. In addition, authors are requested to preface their papers with a brief abstract (100 words or less). All items will be published with the name and affiliation of the contributor and the responsibility for the accuracy of all published material rests solely with the contributor.

ARCH is published twice yearly, in June and December, in addition to the publication of the proceeding of the annual research conference. The subscription price per calendar year is $20.00.

We have been aware of a demand of this type of publication and we are very hopeful that ARCH satisfies this demand. It can only do so if several of our members and friends contribute material for publication. We earnestly solicit your active participation in this venture both as a subscriber and as a contributor.

Original manuscripts of contributions, or dark xerox copies, and inquiries regarding subscriptions should be send to either of the coeditors listed below:
