

TITLE: A model for pricing under competition

AUTHOR: Claude Pichet
Département de mathématiques et d'informatique
Université du Québec à Montréal

ABSTRACT

This is a preliminary report on a research project on the applications of dynamical systems theory in actuarial science, project funded by the AERF. We will briefly describe the nature of dynamical systems and present a tentative model derived from percolation theory and that could be used to understand the pricing variations encountered in a competitive environment and that could also be used as a model for credibility.

